Also, it's free! This article will show you how to edit images using Photoshop Elements. We will go through the process step by step, which will include: 1. Adding and removing layers 2. Rotating layers 3. Painting with a soft brush 4. Creating a graphic effect using the Puppet tool 5. Merging multiple images 6. Saving the image As always, let's get started. Step 1. Adding and removing layers In this Photoshop tutorial, we will be making a 5px cartoon of our puppy. We will add 5 layers to the layer panel to make this happen. Adding layers in Photoshop is simple. Click the + icon and choose Layer 1. Now choose Layer 2 and add it to the layer panel. To add a new layer, move to the Layer Menu and click on the "Layer" > "New" button to add the layer. The default name will be "Layer 1." To delete a layer, double-click on the layer you want to delete. Once you delete the layer, you will no longer have the ability to edit the layer again.

Step 2. Rotating layers There are two ways to rotate layers. You can rotate the layer by dragging the layer to a new location. In this case, we will rotate the New Layer 1 20 degrees clockwise and then 20 degrees counter-clockwise. You can do this by right-clicking on the layer and choosing "Rotate" from the context menu. You can also rotate the layer by holding "Shift" while you drag the layer. In this way, you will rotate both the layer and the layer container simultaneously.

Step 3. Painting with a soft brush You can use brushes to paint the image. Photoshop Elements has two soft brushes: the Colorize Brush and the Watercolor Brush. The Colorize Brush is a simple brush that will colorize an area of the layer. Simply click once on the brush to start painting and click again to stop painting. If there are any colors you want to change, you can click and hold over a color square in the color palette. The brush will automatically change colors as you paint. The Watercolor Brush is a brush that is made of water colors. Clicking and holding over the water color palette changes 388ed7b0c7

Tips from the land of knits and crocs Menu Tag Archives: porcelain knits Today I wanted to show you a very versatile pair of trousers. They are short, fitted and skinny. If you feel the need to go into a running store and buy some shorts, this pair will fit you! My first intention was to wear them as a jacket, but they do have pockets. The material is so nice, that I decided to use these pants as a coat as well. In this case, a floral workmanship made from the fabric. The coat is one of my favorites right now. I didn't want to give away too much here, so don't take my styling advice as gospel. Just try to find your own style, and develop a unique look.

Burglary a recurring problem June 20, 2013 I was recently robbed of my Christmas tree, which was the first time in about seven years of living in my home. A small electrical explosion forced me to the couch, and I was laying there for about two hours. I feel for a change I did not have to wait until the law finally came - they came almost immediately. It was 3:30 p.m. I am just getting home from work and I am not a little nervous. The door was open, but I thought whoever was there may have just come by because they knew I was there. I walk into my home, which is kind of cramped because I have to walk through a kitchen and down a short, narrow hall. As I'm walking through the kitchen, I hear the sliding glass door being opened. What's next, I thought - a false alarm from someone who thinks there's something to be found in my home while I'm not there? I begin to walk toward the front door, but then I hear someone opening another sliding glass door, my bedroom door. I'm thinking, this can't be good, but for all I know, this is just a neighbor who comes in and out. I begin to say a quick prayer in my mind. I'm standing in my living room and I hear a noise. I know something is up with someone at my house. I turn around and my heart stops dead in my chest as I see a young black male wearing dark pants with black tennis shoes, a white T-shirt and black hoodie, peeking over the gun rack in Chamber News Xujiahui High-tech Development Zone On December 21, the land compensation committee of the Xujiahui District Council decided to approve land compensation from the renovation of Xujiahui Software Park for the new Xujiahui High-tech Development Zone (XHDZ). There will be 77,000 square meters of land compensation, of which 56,000 square meters are from the land owned by YP Group, and 20,000 square meters from the YP Group. The compensation is 49,000 square meters for Guangzhou Software Park II, and 14,000 square meters for Guangzhou Software Park. The district government asked YP Group to pay 40% of the compensation for the use of the land, and to pay the rest by the end of March 2018. The National Statistics Bureau reported that China's tech sector registered a record revenue of over RMB 50 billion ($7.72 billion) for 2017, up 11.9% year-on-year, and its exports rose 11.5% to $86.1 billion. Just how much is the tech industry booming? The technology sector could produce 150 million new jobs by 2030, which would be 40% larger than the current number, as the sector will contribute a gross value added of RMB 80 trillion to the economy by 2030, according to a study by PwC China. According to the survey, the tech sector is fast-growing, with the tech and engineering sectors growing the most fast. Companies are also more profitable and have higher levels of cash flow. The study also showed that almost 50% of the tech industry's new jobs are either in enterprises or technical services, while just over 26% are in research and development.
